The Great World War

Those sleepy souls, who never fully awaken until jarred by ome great cataclysm, are amazed and staggered at the intensity and extent of the war storm sweeping over Europe. Bewildered at the crash which, to them, seems to have fallen from a clear sky. they wonder why it is that twentieth century civilization has lapsed into the barbarism of wholesale murder. They see the nations of the old world drop the sickle and seize the sword in the twinkling of an eye; the harvest of grain is deserted for the harvest ness. of destruction; and they stand in open-mouthed amazement wondering how these things can be. But why should they be amazed? Hasn't the history of Europe for forty years pointed to this inevitable climax? Haven't the war lords been grinding their swords and grinding the people in preparation for this very event? Hasn't the intrigue of so-called diplomacy and statesmanship been skirmishing for every possible advantage, all in plain sight of all who would look and see! The bewilderment of the great mass of people is due solely to the fact that for years they refused to see the only outcome of current events. The inevitable conclusion was too unpleasant for them to believe. The cannon makers and battle-ship builders told them that the best provision against war was to be ready for it; so the more cannons cast and the more warships launched the more secure they felt. And now the illusion fades like all the great historical lies lumber yard it would be. foisted upon the thoughtless by power-seeking schemers.

As yet the situation for Americans is not a call to arms; but it is an imperative call to awake and see what is going on in the world and at home. This European war, big as it is, is not final. Back of this war, and back of all the wars that have marked the march of man, is the greater war in which the clash of Triple Alliance and Triple Entente is but a skirmish. The real world-wide struggle, on which the future of the human race depends, is not a petty scramble for territory; not a question of what flag may float over Alsace, Lorrain or Luxembourg; not a question of a German port on the Mediterranean; not a question of naval superiority. The real world-wide war is waged between assumed authority and natural liberty; and its outcome is the real and genuine freedom of every human being.

The sleepy soul is just as dead to the signs of this great struggle as it was to the approach and beginnings of the small scrap across the waters. The great war is going on here in the United States today; but the sleepy ones know it not because there are no bombs or fireworks. The real war is a war of opinions between the monarchistic and aristocratic forces on the one hand and the libertarian and democratic forces on the other.

As it is often expressed, the monarchist and aristocrat believes that supernatural power has bridled and saddled the people of the earth for his use, and has booted and spurred him to ride. He asserts the divine right of kings, the divine right of popes, and the divine right of princes, secular and ecclesiastic, to tell the people what they may do, what they may think, and what they may believe. His part in the great world war is to enforce his ideas by teaching and persuasion as well as by arms. He is particularly busy in the United States today, because of slight opposition, and because the fight is going against him nearly everywhere else.

The libertarian and democrat believes in the divine or natural right of every human being to political, personal and religious freedom. His idea of political freedom is an administration of social affairs by means of just laws enacted by and with the consent of the people. His idea of personal freedom is the removal of every restraint not necessary to the common welfare. His idea of religious freedom is the protection of every human being in the privilege of obeying his own conscience in regard to the religious matters without interference on the part of the state or other individuals.

It is the clash between these two opinions that aligns the whole human race on the world-wide battlefield. It is the greatest world question the human race has undertaken to decide. Beside it all petty national questions sink into insignificance. Purely political monarchism seems to be on the wane. As a nation we have repudiated it, and have declared that this nation shall derive its power from the consent of the governed. But that right of the people is challenged by a surviving politica-ecclesiastical monarch. the pope of Rome, who insists on the divine right to declare what people may do, say, read and think, This politico-religious monarch has invaded this country with with its purpose. an army of eclesiastical princes and underlings to conquer the people paper teachers in the public schools not so much by the usual means of arms as by the more effective means of diplomacy and persuasion. His army of invasion is charged with the duty of breaking down national ideals that make for democracy. His field of warfare is the platform, the press, and the national literature. His Jesuit generals depend more on cunning than on bravery, and on their ability to deceive rather than whip. They seek control of mind, knowing that such control includes that of the body. It is a finer form of warfare, a refined means of con-

And in the presence of this artful enemy the people are asleep. We admire the readiness of the Belgians when Emperor William invaded their native land; but if they had acted as we Americans are doing in the presence of the papal enemy, they would have squabbled among themselves while the German artillery was trampling down their fields and violating their soil. Had the Belgians behaved as we Americans are behaving they would have skulked at home while their Washington Gladdens filled the Belgian press with articles "The anti-German Panie" and exhortations to love the invader on and refrain from hostilities. What we need at this stage of the great world war is a revival of American spirit; the spirit of democracy and liberty that always stands like a stone wall against the encroachment of tyrants. The opinion that prevailed in the founding of this govern ment is more precious to its people than forts and arsenals. That opinion is crystalized in popular government, free institutions, and a public school calculated to foster them and make for their improvement. Monarchism, disguised as religion, assails them at every point and with a cunning that to date has disarmed suspicion. We are in the midst of the greatest of all world wars and are so stupid

Shall we wait until some great physical cataclysm, coarse enough and brutal enough, occurs, before we wake up and rally to the colors? Are we to delay action in the great world-wide war of opinion until it takes bayonets to recapture what ballots will now defend? O, ye sleepy souls! How can you persist in neglecting the defense of all that to intelligent Americans is most dear?

Free Public Schools in Mexico

"Probably the first constructive measure to be taken by the victorious constitutionalists, as soon as Mexico pacified, will be the establishment of a free public school system similar. many respects, to the system in the United States.

This statement was made by Mo desto C. Rolland, Mexican Constitutionalist Consul in New York.

Rolland, a former school teacher in inaloa, and instructor in the Mexican National Military Academy at Chapultepec, has for the past four months been at the head of a commission appointed by General Carranza for the purpose of studying the public school systems of this country.

"Free schools in the rural districts and small towns of Mexico are almost unknown," said Sr. Rolland, "Consid-ering that ninety-five percent of the ulation of Mexico lives in the counpopulation of mexico lives in the country districts, it may readily be seen that this condition is depiorable."

"After careful study in many Eastern and Middle-Western cities I have made a report to General Carranza embodying my conclusions. I find that the school system in Wisconsin

In the opinion of the papacy the established churches of Russia and England are apostacies, and the French government is strictly infidel. That ought to give Great Britain, France and Russia a good send off in the present struggle.

If priests and papist editors would cut out some of their chatter about the evils of matrimony and divorce. and give more attention to the evils of priestly celibacy, they would work in a more fertile field and produce something more readable.

At Burgos, Spain, the papist idolaters preserve what they assert to be the tail of Balaam's ass. If the tail is as efficacious as other mummified relics it is unfortunate that the beast had only one. The preserved bray of the critter is not so limited, and can be heard wherever the holyboners have charms to sell.

In a desperate effort to find a scape goat on which to pile the blame for the Mexican revolution, the papists are telling about some mysterious group American financiers who acked Carranza and are to get something, pobody knows what, in payment for the investment. A good story as far as it goes; but it looks like it had been swiped from the Socialists.

The Forty-Niners of Shawnee

Forty-nine names of avowed papists are signed to a document, printed August 2, in the News-Herald of Shawnee, Oklahoma, in which the signers state that they are good citizens; and, in proof thereof, they have deposited five hundred dollars in a local bank to be paid to charity and the person proving a specified list of antipapal charges.

Their bluff is practically a repetition of that made some time ago by the pope's subjects of Muskogee. Instead of using the half page of space available to justify the treasonable utterances of the papist press or explain the meaning of papal hostility to popular government, the forty-niners assert their goodness and lament the arraignment of the papal system as a personal attack upon themselves. They ask but one question and raise but one point that is worthy of attention; and that appears in the language of their brondside as follows:

'Let us ask what we have done to merit such treatment; we do not interfere with the rights of others; we never abuse in press or pulpit any non-Catholic denomination; we believe that we live up to the precepts of the gospel as well as any other class of people in this community;" etc., etc.

In the absence of proof to the contrary, we are willing to accept the statement of these very serious citizens of Shawnee; but they labor, nevertheless, under several misapprehensions, principal of which is the delusion that they are the Roman Catholic church, when in realty they are merely subjects of the papal machine. The men who are responsible for popery are the men who direct it, not the lay members who are principally its victims. In denouncing slavery the blame and odium is not laid on the slave, but is laid on the master and the system. In denovneing popery the blame is laid on the management and not on the merely obedient.

The gentlemen of Shawnee take themselves too seriously when they hope by their own quietness and inoffensiveness to establish innocence for papists higher up. The Menace has no quarrel with Roman Catholics who behave themselves. In fact such citizens are entitled to special consideration, for when they do the right thing, as we are willing to concede they do at times, they do so not because of their church affiliations but in spite of them. It is not the religious faith known as Roman Catholicism, but the political activity of anti-American ecclesiastics that is attacked by American patriots.

The cause of this eruption in Shawnee is no doubt to be found in the fact that P. A. Seguin, an ex-priest of Rome, has been lecturing in that city for some time, and has organized a state court of the Guardians of Liberty. The papists are alarmed at the aroused spirit of the people who are determined to place none but Americans on guard in public office. Local politicians find that the papist vote is a detriment, instead of an advantage, and papal prestige is waning. All this is for the good of the people as a whole, but more or less distressing to politicians and papists. Under conditions so unhappy for them the political managers of Romanism line up their strength, as they do at the ballot box, and make a demonstration with a fivehundred-dollar deposit; but they are themselves more deceived by their action than anyone else will be.

We would advise the papist brethren of Shawnee to get their ducats out of the bank and pay the taxes the Benedictine fathers have been dodging in that county for years. By so doing they can come before the public with cleaner hands and with a better record for compliance with law than they now possess. As for the cleven LET ME START YOU IN THE MAIL propositions they demand proof for, we are printing the proof in every number of The Menace; and they can have this paper for a whole year at the regular club rate of twenty-five cents.

But we do not expect the Shawnee papists to do what we suggest for they are forbidden by the higher-ups to read The Menace or listen to patriotic lecturers. The bishop tells them what to read and what to believe, and for that reason the spoken or printed proof must go to others who are disposed to examine it and reach rational conclusions.

It is perhaps unfortunate that so many well-meaning people rest under suspicion because of their submission to popery; but it can't for they are forbidden by the higher-ups to read The Menace or listen under suspicion because of their submission to popery; but it can't be avoided so long as they remain the dupes of the most oppressive political despotism that has survived the dark ages. We are safisfied that the forty-niners of Shawnee are much better than the alleged church to which they belong; and we are convinced that they would be still better if they would come out of it and quit the unclean thing. Evil associations corrupt good manners, and the service of a blasphemous Italian monarch is not the service of God.

Does Mayor Mitchell really want to know what is the matter with the New York City schools? It is the same thing that hinders with the New York City schools? It is the same thing that hinders progress in Chicago, Boston, New Haven, Cleveland and in all the Romanized cities of the Union. What is the matter? I will tell you. It is the graduation. There are a majority of Roman Catholic teachers in these public schools. What do you expect from teachers and officials who are schools. What do you expect from teachers and officials who are failures when the teachers are hired by papists to make the schools are the schools? The schools are helieve that the papal parochial school should be substituted for the public school, and that the Roman church should be given exclusive management of national and city education of the youth of the land. So to bring this about Roman Catholic teachers are hired to make good what the papacy says about state education: "A failure, goodless and destructive to the moral of pupils and a damage to the action.
